Eliminating information in the commodity industry is a bad idea. The more transparency the better. Longstanding chicanery by brokerages and employee warrant more not less information. Truth be told these reports should be produced daily to help the public make informed decisions. The government doesn't have the best record of keeping an eye on the commodities over time.

Most of us are like fish in a bowl. Those, looking in, see a great deal more of the fish than it does of itself. Only the fish however can see inside itself. When it gains the viewers perception also, it achieves totality. Think about it. Regards from John McDonald
