From: William Scaduto <wiggss2@yahoo.com>

Sent: Saturday, October 2, 2010 3:12 PM

To: Gensler, Gary <GGensler@CFTC.gov>; Dunn, Michael <MDunn@CFTC.gov>;

Chilton, Bart <BChilton@CFTC.gov>; Sommers, Jill <JSommers@CFTC.gov>; O'Malia, Scott <SO'Malia@CFTC.gov>; PosLimits <PosLimits@CFTC.gov>

Subject: Setting Position Limits

Our futures markets were not created so big financial institutions could manipulate them.

The whole thrust of the Dodd-Frank financial reform law was to keep the big banks from interfering in our markets.

Setting position limits on all commodities of finite supply in a fair, simple, and economically sound manner is what regulation should do.

A formula based on a straight one-percent or less of world production would do that.

William G Scaduto

10100 Burnt Store Rd, #108

Punta Gorda, FL 33950.