Subject: Price Fluctuation Limits

As a farm owner I oppose the proposed amendments to the Chicago Board of Trade maximum daily price fluctuation limits. The changes will primarily make the market more unstable and will not add to the stability of the farm economy, which is already in a precarious position. The changes would primarily benefit a few while being detrimental to the large majority of those affected by market policies. As far as the argument that manual shut-down of the market would become an increasing problem, that merely indicates that the CBOT isn't equipped and ready for a change in the first place.
